Announcing the Arrival of a Shipment of

Architectural Filet Laces

Made by the peasant women in the mountain districts of France.

Shipments of these laces arrive only once a year—in the spring—because it is only during the winter months, when they are not needed in the fields, that the thrifty French peasants have time to make lace.

In the making of Architectural Lace a very coarse net is used and heavy stringlike thread is woven into it in lovely and effective designs inspired by the native artistry of these mountain weavers.

The laces which have just arrived are even more artistic than usual. There are bed spreads in large all over designs, window panels and curtains in basket and conventional patterns, and laces by the yard, both insertions and edgings.

These latter can be used on curtains, table runners, scarfs, boudoir cushions and many other lovely things for your home.

The laces are displayed in our Upholstery Department.
